HOME INSPECTION
SCHOOL

1. Job Security – Millions of homes are bought and sold each year. Even during market slowdowns, this fact doesn't change.
2. Flexibility – Many home inspectors keep their full-time jobs until their name is known by local agents and brokers. You can begin at your own pace.
3. Networking Opportunities – Home inspectors can join the International Association of Certified Home Inspectors (InterNACHI) and enjoy membership benefits, such as discounts on errors and omissions insurance. Allied Home Inspection School provides students their first year membership to InterNACHI at no cost.
4. Don't Punch the Clock – Home inspectors make their own future. Each day you'll decide what your own work priorities are.
5. Be Your Own Boss – Many home inspectors are self-employed. They enjoy the benefits of making their own schedule and growing a successful business.
6. Do Something You Enjoy – Utilize your existing skills and experience to transition into a new career as a home inspector. A do-it-yourselfer or someone in the building trades, construction or real estate brings strong skills to home inspection.
7. Begin Your Career Quickly – You can complete your training in less than a month and do it 100% online.
8. Become a Pro – Allied gives you the tools to be a home inspection professional. Many home inspectors also go on to become specialists in the detection of mold, termites or radon.
9. Work in the Field – Home inspectors enjoy a constantly changing workplace as they inspect new homes and meet new people.
10. A Professional Path – Home inspection is now a well-established profession with a network of accredited training programs, credentials and industry associations. Home inspectors are a crucial part of every home sale.

Allied offers quality home inspection training that prepares you to be an inspection pro. Complete your training in less than a month. The course is fast and flexible – you study when and where you want. You can also finance your training – call today to learn more!
